

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A network connecting wire structure includes a network line, a first connecting plug mounted on a first end of the network line, a second connecting plug mounted on a second end of the network line, and a switch mounted between the first connecting plug and the second connecting plug. Thus, the switch can be used to change the connecting states between two connecting plugs, so that the network connecting wire structure is available for requirements of different functions.